DISTRIBUTION OF
STATE ROAD AID

THIRTEEN COUNTIES TO DRAW
FULL ALLOWANCE, BASED ON 1914 ASSESSMENT.

ESTIMATE IS JUST COMPLETED

Estimated Road Fund is $658,220—
Figures Are Prepared by State
Commissioner Terrell.

(Special Frankfort Correspondence.)

(Frankfort)—Thirteen counties will draw the full amount allowed by law out of the state road fund this year, $13,164, according to estimate just completed by Commissioner of Roads R. C. Terrell. It is based upon the 1914 assessments and levy, excepting a few instances where failure of the counties to report made it necessary to use the 1912 returns. The counties which will draw the full 2 per cent are: Bourbon, Campbell, Christian, Clark, Daviess, Fayette, Graves, Jefferson, Kenton, Mason, McCracken, Nelson and Shelby.

The amount it is estimated each county will receive from the state road fund is based on the ratio, the road levy of that particular county to the total levy for road purposes of all the counties, $2,071,571. The estimated road fund is $658,220. After apportioning the money on this basis, a balance of over $100,000 was redistributed within the limits of the per cent, which is the maximum any county is allowed to draw, and also not exceeding the total amount appropriated for state aid work, including private subscriptions. In no case was a county allotted more than it asked for state aid, as some portions of county levies naturally will be used for other work than the undertaken according to the law governing state aid projects. The distribution of counties issuing bonds will be based upon their road levies and special tax levies for sinking bonds, but the latter does not figure in this estimate, as the commissioner had before him only the 1914 levies to guide him.

Wage Fight on Illiteracy.

The campaign for the eradication of illiteracy will figure in every college commencement in Kentucky this spring. Under a plan suggested by the Kentucky Illiteracy Commission, each senior in each institution will take as his subject for his graduation oration "Kentucky's War Against Illiteracy." The plan was suggested as part of the work of the illiteracy committee appointed in every college in the state. These committees are to assist in the campaign under agreement of every institution of learning to further the cause. These college committees will forward to the commission a list of all the counties and states represented in the school; make maps of the state and the United States with illiteracy statistics furnished by the commission; have an article on the subject published in the college paper; make it the subject of one chapter exercise and an essay; the entire college as far as possible in the active work.

Money Appropriated.

Distribution of the $91,610.31 paid into the United States Court by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. from August 10, 1910, until last June, has been apportioned among the distillery companies and is ready to be checked out in the Greenbrier Distillery case. After the railroad had raised the rates on distillery supplies in order to avoid discrimination under the Interstate Commerce Act, the State Railroad Commission August 10, 1910, entered an order reducing intra-state rates and an appeal was taken. The case came up in the United States Court and pending disposition of the case, the railroad company collected the old rate, but paid the difference between the rate charged and that ordered by the commission to the court. The ruling of the Railroad Commission was sustained by the United States Supreme Court and the money paid into court directed to be paid back to the distillers.

Assistant in Charge.

A posse of revenue officers including John M. Elliott, deputy U. S. Marshal, of Irvine, made a raid on the premises of Amos Durbin, near that city Thursday morning. They arrested Durbin and brought him to Richmond, and succeeded in destroying two still worms and other equipment and 120 gallons of beer.

Robert Puckett who escaped jail in Irvine nearly two years ago, was captured Sunday night by Sheriff Broadbent, Deputy Barnes and Millard Horn. He was found at his home near Iron Mound.

HEAVY FIGHTING IS ON FRENCH PUSH FORWARD AGAINST
GERMAN WEDGE IN MEUSE REGION.

TAKE LES EPARGES TRENCHES

Berlin Denies Claims and Says
Rushes Are Repulsed With Heavy
Losses to the Enemy—Tentons Capture
Drei Grachten.

London, April 10.—The French offensive in the district between the Meuse and the Moselle has developed into one of the most desperate battles of the war.

Official reports given out in Paris last night declare that the important position of Les Eparges, which dominates the plain of Woivre, now is completely in the hands of the allies. Trenches here, it is reported, were "choked with German dead."

In the forest of Montmarie, it is claimed, fifteen attacks of the Germans in efforts to retake trenches captured Thursday were repulsed. The reports add that heaps of German bodies lay upon the ground afterward, while in Champagne the Germans were moved down in a similar offensive movement.

The French claim also the capture of 600 feet of ground in the forest of Alilly.

Bombarding St. Mihiel.

The French are incessantly bombarding St. Mihiel, the point of the wedge they are trying to force out, and at the same time are attacking the two sides of the wedge with infantry and artillery in an endeavor to reach the roads which lead from St. Mihiel to Metz. If the progress already is as great as the French claim it to be, these roads should now be almost within reach of the French guns.

Berlin denies the claims of success made by the allies, however, and official statements say that all French attacks were repulsed in this region. Tremendous loss to the French. The Germans report that the Belgians have been driven out of Drei Grachten, on the Yser canal, with heavy losses.

SEIZES ITALY'S FREIGHT CARS

German Government Also Bars Exports to Rome—Deputies Say War Is Necessary.

Geneva, April 10.—The German government, besides prohibiting exports from Germany to Italy, is stopping at the frontier stations all empty Italian freight cars bound homeward. Passenger trains arriving in Switzerland from Italy are crowded with German families. Railroad rolling stock is being withdrawn by Italy from the Swiss frontier for the transportation of troops and military stores in northern Italy, destined for the region bordering on the Austrian Tyrol.

A Milan dispatch to a Zurich newspaper says that at a mass meeting held last night and attended by five hundred delegates from Milan, a resolution was adopted characterizing as "absolutely necessary" the participation of Italy in the war.

SEE BUSINESS BOOM IN U. S.

Treasury Officials Base Statement on Bank Reports—Revival of Trade Activity Spreads to Every Line.

Washington, April 12.—Treasury officials predicted continued improvement in business conditions throughout the country. Their optimism was based on reports from eighty national banks, which the department declared public in a statement made by a steady return to conditions existing before the European war upset American commercial relations, both domestic and foreign. Revival of business activity in virtually every line was found. Good crops are expected.

GERMANY SENDS
U. S. STINGING NOTE

FILED WITH BRYAN BY BERNSTORFF—CHARACTER OF NEUTRALITY DOUBTED.

United States Is Accused "of Accepting England's Violation of International Law."

Western Newspaper Union News Service Washington.—When the German Embassy made public the full text of the memorandum which Ambassador Von Bernstorff filed with the State Department recently, criticizing the United States Government for alleged discrimination in the enforcement of its neutrality, it was at once recognized in diplomatic circles that an issue of the utmost seriousness for the United States had been raised. The German note challenged the character of American neutrality in blunt language, charging that the United States Government has made "a complete failure" of "safeguarding the legitimate American trade with Germany," and declaring that in view of this failure, "it is to be assumed that the United States Government has accepted England's violation of international law."

This is the strongest criticism leveled against the United States Government since the Turkish Ambassador, Rustem Bey, was recalled last fall for the publication of a letter in which he criticized the policies of the United States. The occasion of Rustem Bey's letter was the sending of an American warship to Turkish waters to protect Americans from threatened danger by Turkish revolutionists and brigands. In his memorandum Count Von Bernstorff raises a new issue with respect to the shipment of arms and ammunition. He says that the international agreements for the protection of the rights of neutrals originate in the necessity of protecting the existing industries of the neutral countries.

KRONPRINZ WILHELM SLIPS IN.

Newport News.—Last of Germany's sea raiders, the Kronprinz Wilhelm, scourge swept, her crew facing starvation, her bunkers empty, barred from New York Harbor by the perpetual guard of British cruisers, sought sanctuary here. The auxiliary cruiser had been at sea 255 days, during which time she sank 14 merchantmen. Nine of these were British, four French and one Norwegian. Many times reported to have been destroyed, the former North German Lloyd liner had evaded hostile warships for eight months.

NO PASSPORT FOR JOHNSON

Will Not Prevent His Going to Europe But Will Handicap His Movements.

Washington, April 10.—Jack Johnson, defeated world's champion heavyweight pugilist, will not be given an American passport when he leaves Cuba. This announcement was made by Secretary of State Bryan. He said he had instructed William E. Gonzales, American minister at Havana, to refuse a passport to the pugilist. This will not prevent Johnson from going to Europe but will handicap his movements abroad.

SENSATIONAL SUCCESS MERITED

THE OXFORD COMPANY.

THE sensational success of the Oxford Company, which is billed for an early appearance here, is Lyceum history. The reason for that success is not, however hard to understand. The personnel of the company insures concert and dramatic work of the very highest character, chosen as it has been with all the care bestowed upon the choosing of a grand opera cast. The results have justified the care. Composed of the company is of professional singers of many years' experience, they sing as only genuine artists can sing. This year's company preserves the same personnel which has won such signal successes: Mrs. Stella Sebastian Ogden, formerly of the famous "Bos-tonians," and understudy to Alice Nielsen for a season, soprano; Mrs. Verne Ross Coburn, formerly of the Schuberts, called the "Schumann-Helms of the Lyceum," contralto; Mr. Claude Hart Ogden of the Oriental Quartet of Chicago, tenor; Mr. Harry Allen Letter, soloist in the Pilgrim Congregational church, basso cantante; Harrison W. Burch, pianist. Mr. Ogden's original arrangements of "The Mikado" and "The Gondoliers" will continue to be features of an exceptional program.

LESSON FOR APRIL 18

THE SHEPHERD'S PSALM.

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 23.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my Shepherd.—Ps. 23.

This is the most famous of the shepherd king's writings. Probably written in his later life, he borrows from the import of the experience of his youth. The relation of the lamb to David is a type to him of his relations to God. Israel's greatest poet had ample time for meditation in the days of his youth as he followed the occupation of shepherd. This playing on the harp is famous and he made the first official use of music in the worship of Jehovah (see I Chron. 15: 15-24). The word "Psalm" is from the Greek, and first meant a stringed instrument. The Hebrew title of this book is "Psalms." Of the 150 psalms David is expressly credited with 73.

To fully study this, the sweetest of all psalms, we must consider it verse by verse.

(1) "My Shepherd." The lamb is David. The Shepherd is Jehovah. The time is man's natural time on earth. The rest is in the future. This Shepherd so provides that the lamb "shall not want." It is his business to care for his sheep. We are the sheep. He is the Shepherd, and his sheep obey his voice (John 10: 4, 5). We shall not want for food, for drink, for grace, for quietness, for companionship, for guidance and for welcome back to the fold at the end of the day or in the time of storm.

(2) "He leadeth me." "The Lord is my Shepherd because (a) he bought me; (b) he feeds me; (c) he leads me."—Robertson. To fully comprehend the deep significance of this psalm we must try to know the land of Palestine to the habits of eastern shepherds; how they feed their flocks, know them by name, and keep constant vigil against the danger of flood and wild beasts. The Lord is an individual shepherd, interested in the one as well as the whole, and as such attends to each individual sheep. He provides a place for us to "lie down in pastures of tender grass;" he also causes us to walk beside "waters of quietness." He makes us to lie down at times and he knows where to lead, providing at the same time both food and drink.

(3) "He restoreth my soul." The Shepherd revives our faintness. If the lamb is too weak, he carries it "in his bosom" until it is revived. Many are the ways he revives us. Word, a sentence, a parable, or an experience will oftentimes restore the sick, weary, sorrowful or sin-buffed child of God. He also leads—remember he does not drive—and his paths are paths of pleasantness and of peace. His paths are "right tracks," not the delusive ones of sin. We cannot walk in these paths without his leadership, without his strengthening rest, and without the invigorating food and drink which is provided for us by the Good Shepherd.

(4) "Yea though I walk." Just as every need has been and will be provided for (Phil. 4: 19) even so will every fear be banished. The flock has passed beyond the "tender grass" and "waters of quietness" into new and strange experiences, into the "valley of deepest darkness," not alone the experience of physical death but all of life's experiences that are shrouded by thick, impenetrable darkness, for the Christian does not always walk in paths of light. Sometimes we carelessly see the Shepherd, but we may always hear his voice. Dark valleys may lie between two excellent pastures grounds even as Bunyan says in Pilgrim's Progress. Death is a shadow, not a substance. For the sting of sin has been removed (I Cor. 15: 54-57). Why not fear? "For thou art with me" and he is stronger than any possible enemy. There are dangers which we cannot cope with, but as he is with us "we are able."

"My cup runneth over." Here the figure changes. Jehovah is now the bountiful host. What a feast he has spread! David as a shepherd and as a fugitive from Saul knew the pinch of hunger and the satisfaction of eating in peace, in the very presence of his enemies, man and beast. They that are Christ's have enemies (John 15: 19; II Tim. 3: 12), but as our host he has spread a banquet in their very presence while the world goes on feasting upon the husks. He also anoints our heads with the "oil of gladness," the Holy Spirit (Acts 10: 38; I John 2: 20, 27 R. V.). For the ancient feast this anointing was an essential preparation.

(5) "I shall dwell . . . forever." Goodness and mercy pursued the psalmist in marked contrast with the calamity and the angel of judgment which follow the wicked (Ps. 35: 6; 140: 11). There is a perpetuity of blessing as well as the penalty of sin. The psalmist leaves the feast for his dwelling house which shall abide "to length of days." This is to be interpreted in its fullness only by the New Testament (John 14: 1-3; I Thess. 4: 16, 17). Everlasting fellowship, communion and companionship with the Chief Shepherd, the "great Shepherd of the sheep."

WHEREAS, In the demise of Mrs. Maude Vaughn Perkins, which occurred on February 21, 1914, after a brief illness, we were brought to a full realization of the fact that the Grim Reaper is no respecter of persons and that, indeed, "Death loves a shining mark." She was the beloved wife of Mr. Tony Perkins and daughter of our esteemed Past Chancellor, T. C. Vaughn.

WHEREAS, We deeply deplore the death of this splendid young woman and recognize in her demise the loss of a life that had imparted much joy and sunshine during her brief earthly stay; and in her departure for yonder shore, we are mindful of the loss of a true, loyal and devoted friend, whom we will ever cherish in memory; therefore, we resolved, That we, the members of Normal City Lodge No. 102, Knights of Pythias, of Richmond, Ky., recognizing in her death the sad, irreparable loss sustained by the bereaved family and friends, and especially our beloved Past Chancellor, T. C. Vaughn, all of whom have come to that chasm in human life which alone the soul can explore, we therefore tender our sincere and heartfelt sympathy to them in this their hour of deepest sorrow. We have only sympathy for those who mourn; tears for the dead.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family of the deceased, and same be spread upon the minutes of the lodge.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

WHEREAS, Death has again laid its icy hand upon one of our good citizens, and called him from his earthly labors. On March 26, 1914, Mr. John H. Jackson, of near Kingston, father of our beloved brother, O. P. Jackson, tendered his lease on this life and entered into that dreamless sleep from which there is no earthly awakening.

WORK OF HEN IS IMPORTANT

Taken in Aggregate Her Business is Big Thing to Farmer at End of Year—Give Green Feed.

(By JOHN H. PAGE, Arkansas Commissioner of Agriculture.)
Do not overlook or neglect the hen. Her business is a small one, it is true, but, taken in the aggregate, at the end of a year it is a big thing to the farmer.

The best way to get eggs is to look after the hens a little. See that they can get plenty of fresh water every day. See that they get some meat scraps, ground bone and oyster shells, too, if you can. The most important is a green feed during the winter, when there is no green feed. The way to make it cheap is to use oats.

Fill a tub or bucket nearly full of oats. Pour warm water over them and let stand all night. Next day put a layer of oats about an inch deep on an old burp sack laid on top of some boards. Cover over with another sack, and spread on another layer of oats and then another sack and so on until all the oats are spread. Then wet the whole pile every day or two with warm water, and in a warm place, where it will not freeze, until the oats sprout. When the sprouts get two or three inches long begin to feed them to the chickens.

Miss Livia King, of Ford, attempted to take her life Monday morning by jumping in front of the early train which reaches that place about 6:30 o'clock. No reason was given for her rash act. She is about 30 years of age, and has lived at Ford all her life.

Men Who Chew Are Men Who DO

NO men more fully enjoy the jolly companionship of good chewing tobacco than the foresters who conserve America's standing timber.

These big, brave, brawny men, as ready to fight a forest fire to a stand-still as they are to take a twenty mile "hike" in the dead of night, are STAR pluggers as well as STAR chewers. They find STAR mighty pleasant company when they're alone—and when they meet a traveler they're glad to pass their plug to him. They know that STAR is good for one and better for two.

Each STAR plug is thick with a thickness of long lasting, mellow chewing leaf that just suits to a "T" the taste of Americans. Each STAR plug weighs a full 16 ounce pound, every time. Each plug is made clean and kept so; a STAR plug won't dry out like a thin plug—and the taste lasts. It will just take you but a few seconds to cut off a chew of STAR and get it into your mouth—to understand why STAR is the leading brand of the world.

How TO CURE A CHRONIC COUGH

Told in the Following Letter by a Jackson Man Who Knows from Experience. His Word Is Good.

Jackson, Miss.—"I am a carpenter, and the gripe left me not only with a chronic cough, but I was run-down, worn out and weak. I took all kinds of cough syrups but they did me no good. I finally got so weak I was not able to do a day's work, and coughed so much I was alarmed about my condition. One evening I read about Vinol and decided to try it. Before I had taken a quarter of a bottle I felt better, and after taking two bottles my cough is entirely cured, all the bad symptoms have disappeared and I have gained new vim and energy."

—JOHN L. DENNIS, 711 Lynch Street, Jackson, Miss.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because the active medicinal principles of cod liver oil contained in Vinol rebuild wasting tissues and supplies strength and vigor to the nerves and muscles while the tonic iron and wine assist the red corpuscles of the blood to absorb oxygen and distribute it through the system, thus restoring health and strength to the weakened, diseased organs of the body.

If Vinol fails to help you, we return your money.

Death of Mrs. J. R. Reynolds.
A death which has cast a pall over the entire city is that of Mrs. J. R. Reynolds, which occurred on Sunday night at 10 o'clock, as the result of uremic poison. She was taken to the P. A. C. Infirmary, Thursday, where she gave birth to a baby boy, who died and was buried Friday. Everything that tender, loving care could do was done for her, but in vain and she sank rapidly to the end. Mrs. Reynolds had been in the community only a short while, but in that time had endeared herself to all by her kind, gentle disposition and charming character. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Baptist church, and was conducted by Dr. Porter, of Lexington. Many beautiful flowers were sent by the church, individual friends and the family. The body was taken on the 5 o'clock train to her old home in West Virginia, accompanied by her husband and children, her mother and one sister. To the grief-stricken family, all hearts go out in tenderest sympathy.

Tragic Death of Nathan Turpin
A very distressing death was that of young Nathan Turpin. Last week he was fishing near Heidelberg and a large limb fell from a tree striking him on the head and fracturing the skull. He was brought to the P. A. C. Infirmary where everything was done for him, but without avail. He died Saturday night. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Turpin and was a nice, energetic boy and had many friends.

Young Turpin was engaged to be married in June to Miss Rhoda Lee Hazelitt, of Rice Station, Estill county, a very handsome young woman. She has been completely prostrated by the blow.

His funeral was held here Monday under the auspices of the local lodge of Red Men, of which body he was an honored member. The funeral was presided by Dr. E. C. McDougle, and interment was in the Richmond cemetery where the body was laid to rest under a cover of beautiful flowers.

Joe Collins Kills Lewis Turner.

On Sunday night a week ago at about six o'clock, Joe Collins a negro struck Lewis Turner on the head with a pistol inflicting an ugly wound from which he died Saturday night at nine o'clock at the P. A. C. Infirmary. It seems the trouble originated over the whipping of Turner's child by Collins and when the former went to him about it, some words passed between them with the result above mentioned. Collins was arrested and is now in jail.

Accidentally Poisoned.
William Fife, two-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Fife, of Winchester, was seized with illness while playing in front of his home Friday, and for a while his condition was alarming. It was believed he found and swallowed some of the poison which has been put out by unknown persons to kill dogs.

The child was given immediate attention by a physician, who administered antidotes, and the little fellow has about recovered from the attack.

Miss Hurst's Recital
The recital given on Saturday evening by Miss Jeanie Barron Hurst was one of the notable events of the month. Her interpretation of Justin Huntly McCarthy's graphic story, "If I Were King," was very fine and showed her splendid talent for impersonation of widely different characters to the fullest. The stage setting was especially pretty, the decorations being in yellow and white roses, jonquils, and ferns, which harmonized perfectly with the handsome gown of shaded yellow silk and chiffon worn by Miss Hurst. Miss Telford charmed her hearers with the "Sextette" from Lucia, played on the harp and also with a beautiful encore.

Though the world is harsh and the game goes wrong
And the skies are far from clearing,
And out of the vast uncaring throng
There's never a word that's cheering,
Though fortune shun me soon and late
And destiny jolt and shove me,
I'll keep my nerve and I'll laugh at fate,
While I have a friend to love me!

If I have one friend who is real and true
One friend who will not falter,
I'll fight the world and the devil too
And never my heart shall falter,
Though I know despair and I know defeat
And the clouds hang black above me,
I'll fear no fate that is mine to meet
While I have a friend to love me!

The Woman's Club met on Monday afternoon and enjoyed three very delightful discussions. The first subject on the program being "The Need of Kentucky," by Miss Partridge, proved to be one of the best features of the year. Those who know Miss Partridge are familiar with her keen satire, her kindly sense of humor and her power to convince, and she was at her best on this occasion. She brought to light many startling facts in regard to this all important theme.

Mrs. W. R. Park read a well written and interesting paper on "Education in the Home," which was greatly enjoyed, as was also a talk by Mrs. S. B. Hume on "What the State is Doing for Mountain Students." Mrs. K. N. Roark, the new president, presided most gracefully.

Mrs. Thomas J. Smith, who went to Lexington yesterday to attend the lecture given at the Ben Ali Theater last evening by the noted English suffragist, Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, was one of the guests at a dinner given before the lecture in honor of Mrs. Lawrence by her hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Desha Breckinridge. Oldham, Mrs. Will Smith and Mrs. Quisenberry were the hostesses.

The ladies of the Baptist church held a very delightful and informal meeting at the church Wednesday evening following the Prayer service and teachers conference. Lovely refreshments were served by Mrs. Jonah Wagers, Mrs. S. G. Zinke, Mrs. Jas. Smith and Mrs. Lewis Herrington.

Dying Woman's Prophecy.

Mr. Rex W. Dunlap, of Kansas City, who has been in London, in a letter dated March 12, 1915, written to friends, gives a description of the English view of the war. He says that everything impresses one with a calm resignation on the part of the British people. Their armies are drilling and the women are at home sewing for the soldiers. He writes of a strange prophecy made by a woman who had not spoken for seven years. Although dumb, she was in apparent good health and was sitting with a group of friends listening to them talk, when she suddenly stood up and spoke, "The war ends April 27." She then dropped to the floor dead.

In London the streets are dark at night and the authorities have painted black the upper half of the light globes. Once off the street, however, everything is as usual. Shops are crowded and the shows play to full houses. The city is full of Belgian and French refugees and some Americans. The English slogan is, "Carry on business as usual."

Mr. Dunlap is doing service as a special correspondent for the American newspapers. He is a nephew of Mrs. Allis, of this city.

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which is sent the victims, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Elaine, daughter of the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man. Enraged at the determined effort which Elaine and Craig Kennedy are making to put an end to his crimes, the Clutching Hand, as this strange criminal is known, resorts to all sorts of the most diabolical schemes to put them out of the way. Each chapter of the story tells of a new plot against their lives and of the way the great detective uses all his skill to save this pretty girl and himself from death.

TENTH EPISODE

THE LIFE CURRENT.

Assignments were being given out on the Star one afternoon, and I was standing talking with several other reporters in the busy hub of type-writers and clicking telegraphs.

"What do you think of that?" asked one of the fellows. "You're something of a scientific detective, aren't you?"

Without laying claim to such a distinction, I took the paper and read:

THE POISONED KISS AGAIN.

Three More New York Women Report Being Kissed by Mysterious Stranger—Later Fell Into Deep Unconsciousness—What Is It?

I had scarcely finished when one of the copy boys, dashed past me, called out: "You're wanted on the wire, Mr. Jameson."

I hurried over to the telephone and answered.

A musical voice responded to my hurried hello, and I hastened to adopt my most polite tone.

"Is this Mr. Jameson?" asked the voice.

"Yes," I replied, not recognizing it. "Well, Mr. Jameson, I've heard of you on the Star, and I've just had a very strange experience. I've had the poisoned kiss."

The woman did not pause to catch my exclamation of astonishment, but went on: "It was like this. A man ran up to me on the street and kissed me—and I don't know how it was—but I became unconscious—and I didn't come to for an hour—in a hospital—fortunately. I don't know what would have happened if it hadn't been that someone came to my assistance and the man fled. I thought the Star would be interested."

"We are," I hastened to reply. "Will you give me your name?"

"Why, I am Mrs. Florence Leigh of No. 20 Prospect avenue," returned the voice.

"Say," I exclaimed hurrying over to the editor's desk, "here's another woman on the wire who says she has received the poisoned kiss."

"Suppose you take that assignment," the editor answered, sensing a possible story.

I took it with alacrity, figuring out the quickest way by elevated and surface to reach the address.

I must say that I could scarcely criticize the poisoned kisser's taste, for the woman who opened the door certainly was extraordinarily attractive.

"And you really were—put out by a kiss?" I queried, as she led me into a neat sitting room.

"Absolutely—as much as if it had been by one of those poisoned needles you read about," she replied confidently, hastening on to describe the affair volubly.

It was beyond me. "May I use your telephone?" I asked.

"Surely," she answered. I called the laboratory. "Is that you, Craig?" I inquired.

"Yes, Walter," he answered, recognizing my voice.

"Say, Craig," I asked breathlessly, "what sort of kiss would suffocate a person?"

My only answer was an uproarious laugh from him at the idea.

"I know," I persisted, "but I've got the assignment from the Star—and I'm out here interviewing a woman about it. It's all right to laugh—but here I am. I've found a case—names, dates and places. I wish you'd explain the thing, then."

"Oh, all right, Walter," he replied indulgently. "I'll meet you as soon as I can and help you out."

The bell rang and the woman hastened to the door, admitting Kennedy.

"Hello, Walter," he greeted.

"This is certainly a most remarkable case, Craig," I said, introducing him, and telling briefly what I had learned.

"And you actually mean to say that a kiss had the effect—"

Just then the telephone interrupted. "Yes," she reassured quickly. "Excuse me a second."

She answered the call. "Oh—why—yes, he's here. Do you want to speak to him? Mr. Jameson, it's the Star."

"Confound it," I exclaimed, "isn't that like the old man—dragging me off this story before it's half finished in order to get another. I'll have to go. I'll get this story from you, Craig."

The day before, in the suburban house, the Clutching Hand had been talking to two of his emissaries, an attractive young woman and a man.

They were Flirtie Florrie and Dan the Dude.

"Now, I want you to get Kennedy," he said. "The way to do it is to separate Kennedy and Elaine—see?"

"All right, Chief, we'll do it," they replied.

Clutching Hand had scarcely left when Flirtie Florrie began by getting published in the papers the story which I had seen.

The next day she called me up from the suburban house, giving me no promise to see her, she had scarcely turned from the telephone when Dan the Dude walked in from the next room.

"He's coming," she said.

Dan was carrying a huge stag head with a beautifully branched pair of antlers. Under his arm was a coil of wire which he had connected to the inside of the head.

"He's coming," she said. "Then, pointing to the head, he added, 'That's all ready. See how I fixed it? It ought to please the Chief.'"

Dan moved quickly to the mantel and mounted a stepladder there by which he had taken down the head, and started to replace the head above the mantel.

He hooked the head on a nail. "There," he said, unscrewing one of the beautiful brown glass eyes of the stag.

Back of it could be seen a camera shutter.

"One of those new quick shutter cameras," he explained.

Then he ran a couple of wires along the molding around the room and into a closet, where he made the connection with a sort of switchboard on which a button was marked, "SHUTTER" and the switch, "WIND FILM."

"Now, Flirtie," he said, coming out of the closet and pulling up the shade which let a flood of sunlight into the room. "You see, I want you to stand here—then, do your little trick."

Just then the bell rang. "That must be Jameson," she cried. "Now—get to your corner."

With a last look Dan went into the closet and shut the door.

Perhaps half an hour later Clutching Hand himself called me up on the telephone. It was he—not the Star—as I learned only too late.

I had scarcely got out of the house, as Craig told me afterwards, when Flirtie Florrie told all over again the embroidered tale that had caught my ear.

Kennedy said nothing, but listened intently, perhaps betraying in his face the skepticism he felt.

"You see," he said, still voluble and eager to convince him, "I was only walking on the street. Here—let me show you. It was just like this."

She took his arm and, before he knew it, led him to the spot on the floor near the window which Dan had watched with interest, tinged with doubt. Behind Craig in his closet, Dan was reaching for the switchboard button.

"You see," she said advancing quickly and acting her words, "he placed his hands on my shoulders—then threw his arms about my neck—so!"

She said no more, but imprinted a deep, passionate kiss on Kennedy's mouth, clinging closely to him. Before Kennedy could draw away, Dan, at the closet, had pressed the button and the switch several times in rapid succession.

"That—that's very realistic," gasped Craig, a good deal taken aback by the sudden osculatory assault.

He frowned.

"I'll look into the case," he said, backing away. "There—there may be some scientific explanation—but—"

He was plainly embarrassed and hastened to make his adieu.

How little impression the thing made on Kennedy can be easily seen from the fact that on the way downtown that afternoon he stopped at Martin's, on Fifth avenue, and bought a ring—a very handsome solitaire, the finest he had in the shop.

It must have been about the time that he decided to stop at Martin's that the Dodge butler, Jennings, admitted a young lady who presented a card on which was engraved the name

Miss Florence Leigh, 20 Prospect Avenue.

As he handed Elaine the card, she looked up from the book she was reading and took it.

"All right, show her in, Jennings. I'll see her."

Elaine moved into the drawing room, springing forward to part the portieres for her and passing through the room quickly where Flirtie Florrie sat waiting. Flirtie Florrie rose and stood gazing at Elaine, apparently very much embarrassed, even after Jennings had gone.

"It is embarrassing," she said finally. "But, Miss Dodge, I have come to you to beg for my love."

Elaine looked at her nonplused.

"Yes," she continued, "you do not know it, but Craig Kennedy is infatuated with you."

She paused again, then added, "He is engaged to me."

Elaine stared at the woman. She was dazed. She could not believe it. "There is the ring," Flirtie Florrie added, indicating a very impressive paste diamond.

Quickly she reached into her bag and drew out two photographs, with out a word, handing them to Elaine.

"There's the proof," Florrie said simply, choking a sob.

Elaine looked with a start. Sure enough, there was the neat living room in the house on Prospect avenue. In one picture Florrie had her arms over Kennedy's shoulders. In the other, apparently, they were passionately kissing.

Elaine slowly laid the photographs on the table.

"Please—please, Miss Dodge—give me back my lost love. You are rich and beautiful—I am poor. I have only my good looks. But—I—I love him—and he loves me—and has promised to marry me."

Florrie had broken down completely and was weeping softly into a lace handkerchief.

She moved toward the door. Elaine followed her.

"Jennings—please see the lady to the door."

Back in the drawing-room, Elaine seized the photographs and hurried into the library where she could be alone.

Just then she heard the bell and Kennedy's voice in the hall.

"How are you this afternoon," Kennedy greeted Elaine gaily.

Elaine had been too overcome by what had just happened to throw it off so easily, and received him with studied coolness.

Still, Craig, manlike, did not notice it at once. In fact, he was too busy gazing about to see that neither Jennings, Marie nor the duenna Aunt Josephine were near.

He and she quickly took the ring from his pocket. Without waiting, he showed it to Elaine.

Elaine very coolly admired the ring, as Craig might have eyed a specimen on a microscope slide. Still, he did not notice.

He took the ring, about to put it on her finger. Elaine drew away. Concealment was not in her frank nature.

She picked up the two photographs. "Why have you to say about those?" she asked cuttingly.

Kennedy, quite surprised, took them and looked at them. Then he let them fall carelessly on the table and dropped into a chair, his head back in a burst of laughter.

"Why—that was what they put over on Walter," he said. "He called me up early this afternoon—told me he had discovered one of those poisoned kiss cases you have read about in the papers. Think of it—all that to pull a concealed camera! Such an elaborate business—just to get me where they could take this thing. I suppose they've put someone up to saying she's engaged?"

Elaine was not so lightly affected. "But," she said severely, representing her emotion, "I don't understand, Mr. Kennedy, how scientific inquiry into the poisoned kiss could necessitate this sort of thing."

She pointed at the photographs accusingly.

"But," he began, trying to explain. "No buts," she interrupted.

"Then you believe that I—"

"How can you, as a scientist, ask me to doubt the camera?" she insisted, very coldly turning away.

"But," she said, trying to see that it was far more serious than he had at first thought.

"Very well," he said with a touch of immaturity, "if my word is not to be taken—I'll—"

He had seized his hat and stick. Elaine did not deign to answer.

Then, without a word, he stalked out of the door.

Kennedy was moping in the laboratory the next day when I came in.

"Say, Craig," he said, trying to overcome his fit of blues.

Kennedy, filled with his own thoughts, paid no attention to me. Then he jumped up.

"By George—I will," he muttered. I poked my head out of the door in time to see him grab his hat and coat and dash from the room, putting his coat on as he went.

"He's a nut today," I exclaimed to myself.

Though I did not know yet of the quarrel, Kennedy had really struggled with himself until he was willing to put his pride in his pocket and had made up his mind to call on Elaine again.

As he entered he saw that it was really no use, for only Aunt Josephine was in the library.

"Oh, Mr. Kennedy," she said innocently enough, "I'm so sorry she isn't here. There's been something troubling her, and she won't tell me what it is. But she's gone to call on a young woman, a Florence Leigh, I think."

"Florence Leigh!" exclaimed Craig with a start and a frown. "Let me use your telephone."

I had turned my attention in the laboratory to a story I was writing, when I heard the telephone ring. It was Craig. Without a word of apology for his rudeness, we had been so busy absent-minded, I heard him say: "Walter, meet me in half an hour outside that Florence Leigh's house."

Half an hour later I was waiting near the house in the suburbs to which I had been directed by the strange telephone call the day before. I noticed that it was apparently deserted. The blinds were closed and a "To Let" sign was on the side of the house.

"Hello, Walter," cried Craig at last, bustling along.

He led the way around the side of the house to a window, and, with a powerful grasp, wrenched open the closed shutters. He had just smashed the window when a policeman appeared.

"Hey, you fellows—what are you doing there?" he shouted.

Craig paused a second, then pulled his card from his pocket.

"Just the man I want," he parried.

NEW DISCOVERY FOR ECZEMA

Doctors Having Great Success With Amolox.

Amolox is performing wonderful cures after all other remedies have failed. It is the prescription of a well-known physician who has used it in his private practice. For the first time it is now offered to sufferers of skin diseases at leading drug stores. much to the policeman's surprise. "There's something crooked going on here. Follow us in."

We climbed into the window. There was the same living room we had seen the day before. But it was now bare and deserted.

"Come on," cried Kennedy, beckoning us on.

Quickly he rushed through the house. There was nothing in it to change the deserted appearance of the first floor. At last it occurred to Craig to grope his way down cellar. There was nothing there.

Kennedy had been carefully going over the place, and was at the other side of the cellar from ourselves when I saw him stop and gaze at the floor.

"Hide," he whispered suddenly to us.

We waited a moment. Nothing happened. Had he been seeing things or hearing things, I wondered?

From our hidden vantage we could now see a square piece in the floor, perhaps five feet in diameter, slowly open up as though on a pivot.

It was not before a vile effluvia seemed to escape, and penetrate even to us in our hiding places. As he moved forward, Kennedy gave a flying leap at him, and we followed with a regular football interference.

It was the work of only a moment for us to subdue and hold him, while Craig ripped off the helmet.

It was Dan the Dude.

"What's that thing?" I puffed, as I helped Craig with the headgear.

"An oxygen helmet," he replied. "There must be air down the tube that cannot be breathed."

He went over to the tube. Carefully he opened the top and gazed down, starting back a second later, with his face puckered up at the noxious odor.

"Sewer gas," he ejaculated, as he slammed the cover down. Then he added to the policeman: "Where do you suppose it comes from?"

"Why," replied the officer, "the St. James viaduct—an old sewer—is somewhere about these parts."

Kennedy nudged his face as he gazed at our prisoner. He reached down quickly and lifted something off the man's coat.

"Golden hair," he muttered. "Elaine's!"

At a moment later he seized the man and shook him roughly.

"Where is she—tell me?" he demanded.

The man snarled some kind of a reply, refusing to say a word about her. "Tell me," repeated Kennedy.

"Humph!" snorted the prisoner, more close-mouthed than ever.

Kennedy was furious. As he sent the man reeling away from him he seized the oxygen helmet and began putting it on. There was only one thing to do—to follow the clue of the golden strands of hair.

Down into the peat hole he went, his head protected by the oxygen helmet. As he cautiously took one step after another down a series of iron rungs inside the hole, he found that the water was up to his chest. At the bottom of the perpendicular pit was a narrow, low passageway leading off.

It was just about big enough to get through, but he managed to grope along it.

The minutes passed as the policeman and I watched our prisoner in the water by the tube. I looked anxiously at my watch.

"Craig!" I shouted at last, unable to control my fears for him.

No answer.

By this time Craig had come to a small, open chamber, into which the water was up to his chest. On the wall he found another series of iron rungs, up which he climbed. The gas was terrible.

As he neared the top of the ladder he came to a shelf-like aperture in the sewer chamber, and gazed about. It was horribly dark. He reached out and felt a piece of cloth. Anxiously he pulled on it. Then he reached further into the darkness.

There was Elaine, unconscious, apparently dead.

In desperation Craig carried her down the ladder.

With our prisoner we could only look helplessly around.

"By George, I'm going down after him," I cried in desperation.

"Don't do it," advised the policeman. "You'll never get up."

One whiff of the horrible gas told me that he was right.

"Listen," said the policeman. "There was, indeed, a faint noise from the black depths below us. A rope alongside the rough ladder began to move, as though some one was pulling it taut. He gazed down.

"Craig! Craig!" I called. "Is that you?"

No answer. But the rope still moved. Perhaps the helmet made it impossible for him to hear.

He had struggled back in the swirling current almost exhausted by his helpless burden. Holding Elaine's head above the surface of the water and pulling on the rope to attract my attention, he could neither hear nor shout. He had taken a turn of the rope about Elaine. I tried pulling on it. There was something heavy on the other end, and I kept on pulling.

At last I could make out Kennedy dimly mounting the ladder. The weight was the unconscious body of Elaine which he steadied as he mounted the ladder. I tugged harder and he slowly came up.

Together, at last, the policeman and I reached down and pulled them out.

We placed Elaine on the cellar floor, as comfortably as was possible, and the policeman began his first aid motions for resuscitation.

"No—no!" cried Kennedy. "Not here—take her up—where the air is fresher."

With his revolver still drawn to overawe the prisoner, the policeman forced him to aid us in carrying her up the rickety flight of cellar steps. Kennedy followed quickly, unscrewing the oxygen helmet as he went.

In the deserted living room we deposited our rescued burdens. While Kennedy, the helmet off now, bent over her.

"Quick—quick!" he cried to the officer. "An ambulance!"

"But the prisoner," the policeman insisted.

"Hurry—hurry! I'll take care of him," urged Craig, seizing the policeman's pistol and thrusting it into his pocket. "Walter, help me."

He was trying the ordinary methods of resuscitation. Meanwhile the officer had hurried out, seeking the nearest telephone, while we worked madly to bring Elaine back.

Again and again Kennedy bent and stretched her arms, uttering duce respiration again. So busy was I that for the moment I forgot our prisoner.

But Dan had seen his chance. Noiselessly he picked up the old chair in the room and with it raised was approaching Kennedy to knock him out.

Before I knew it myself Kennedy had heard him. With a half instinctive motion he drew the revolver from his pocket and, almost before I could see it, had shot this man. Without a word he returned the gun to his pocket and again bent over Elaine, without so much as a look at the crook, who sank to the floor, dropping the chair from his nerveless hands.

Already the policeman had got an ambulance, which was now tearing along to us.

COMMON SENSE

Longfellow could take worthless piece of paper and write a poem on it and make it worth $65,000—that's genius. There are some men who could write a few words on a piece of paper and make it worth $8,000,000—that's capital. The United States can take an ounce and a quarter of gold and make it worth $20—that's money. A mechanic can take material worth $5 and make it into watch springs worth $1,000—that's skill. There is a man in Chicago who can take a fifty-cent piece of canvas, paint a picture on it, and make it worth $1,000—that's art. A Greek can take an article worth 75 cents and sell it for $2—that's business. A woman could purchase a hat for 75 cents but prefer one worth $27.00—that's foolishness. A ditch digger handles several tons of earth for $1.50 a day—that's labor. The editor of this paper can write a check for $9,000,000, but it wouldn't be worth a dime—that's rough. There are people who will tell you that other papers are as good as this—that's nerve. Take $1.00 and get a year's subscription to this paper which for 12 years has done its best to boost the county, city, and to do something for you.

No Trouble To Run a Paper.

Just after we finished running off the paper last week, a cheerful party remarked: "Well, the paper is out! You can take it easy for a few days, can't you?" Yep. Nothing at all to do. As soon as the paper is out, the editor is printed all over the place to do it. To sit around watching the little bills come due, and gently shaking his money bush until enough dollars drop off to pay those, these or other bills. When the editor is not running off the paper his favorite pastime is to recline on a divan, smoking a fine, full-flavored cigar, and watch his subscribers struggling with each other to get on his list and pay the furthest in advance. If he becomes on edge, he puts out his cigar, slips it in his pocket and saunters nonchalantly down the boulevard de Main, just to hear the merchants clamor for additional space as with tears in their eyes they beg for his attention. And the way the news hunts up the editor is pleasant to contemplate. When the paper is out the editor goes to his desk, leans back in his chair, looks wise and waits till the day before next press day, when the people line up in front of his office and then file past his desk and tell him all the news of the week. He writes it up in ten or fifteen minutes and hangs it on the hook. The compositors shake the copy over the cases and say a few mystic words and the type flies into place and after a few passes by the foreman the forms are ready for the press again and the editor goes down and deposits some money in the bank. It's the greatest snap in the catalogue. Now if the editor could only do away with press days his joy would be complete.

Editors Prices For "Puffs."

An eastern editor comes to the conclusion that those desiring "puffs" in his paper must pay for them, and has established the following prices:

For telling the public that a man is a successful citizen, when everybody knows that he is as lazy as a hired man, $2.00.

Referring to the deceased citizen as one who is mourned by the entire community, when we know he will only be missed by the poker circle, $10.17.

Referring to some gallant fellow as an estimable lady whom it is a pleasure to meet, when every business man in town would rather see Satan coming, $5.10.

Calling an ordinary pulpit orator an eminent divine, 60 cents.

Sending a doughty sinner to heaven, $5.60.

Referring to a deceased merchant who never advertised in his life as a progressive citizen, $4.99.

Meeting of The Fiscal Court.

At the last meeting of the Fiscal Court held Tuesday, the Court decided to aid the city in the reconstruction of Main street in front of the court house, provided the plans adopted by the city are satisfactory to the Court.

The Court fixed the tax levy for this year at 54 cents, which was the same as it has been for several years. The Court had anticipated being able to reduce the tax limit, but was unable to do so on account of the unexpected action of the County Board of Education. This Board asked for an allowance of $20,000 this year for the assistance of the public school system of the county. A tax levy of 10 cents was made, which it is thought will produce that amount.

The Fiscal Court redeemed and destroyed $17,000 worth of the old railroad bonds. This Court has made a record for bond burning, and it has succeeded in paying off the floating indebtedness of the county to the extent of $58,000. The Court is composed of gentlemen, of the highest integrity, who seem filled with the laudable ambition to pay off as much of the county's indebtedness as possible. It has been disappointed in its inability to reduce the tax rate, but it was unable to do so on account of the school levy as before stated.

HAVE YOU CATARRH?

It's a Dangerous Disease—Hymel Is The Effective Remedy.

Catarrh, which is indicated by sniffing, frequent colds and trouble in the nose is a serious disease and if not checked, surely spreads to the delicate lining of the air passages, and frequently destroys the hearing.

To cure catarrh you must have something that will quickly reach the diseased tissues, kill the germs and drive out the poisons.

Hymel is just such a remedy. Being a mixture of antiseptic oils that you breathe through a small inhaler its health-restoring medication cannot help going direct to the seat and inflamed lining of the nose and throat, quickly relieving that clogged up feeling, stopping the unclean discharges, and healing the sore spots—you breathe freely. Even the worst cases respond at once.

There is nothing for the treatment of catarrh hills that is easier, more pleasant or so satisfying as Hymel. B. L. Middleton sells it on the "No-cure-no-pay" plan.—Adv.

WHEN THE FOWLS WON'T LAY

Complaint Is Heard at All Seasons of Year—Ample Supply of Water Is Essential for Eggs.

Every month or so I hear some chicken growler complaining that his or her hens won't lay, in spite of the fact that they have plenty of fresh water and that the ration is so balanced that it ought to make the hens lay in spite of themselves.

This complaint is heard at all seasons of the year and from the farm hen owner as well as the man who is trying to make a success of commercial poultry growing. It is serious, too; for the steady, daily production of eggs is the thing that we depend upon to make him keeping pay. In some flocks it is a high-chick complaint, but the owners seem never to be able to discover just why the hens will lay for a month or two at one season and go on a strike for the rest of the year, says a writer in Farm Progress.

Any one of a hundred reasons may be the cause of the failure of the hens to lay when they should and as they should. Take the one reason of old age, for instance. A lot of us manage our birds in such a haphazard way that they are never very sure of just how old all our hens are. Some people, too, who are not regular producers of eggs, feed them regularly and neglect proper watering. As a hen gets to be about two-thirds water it is very evident that plenty of water of the right kind is one of the materials necessary to produce eggs. Then, we sometimes neglect the question of grit, of charcoal, of egg-laying materials that have to do with shell making and bone strengthening.

In one or two cases that I have noticed the cause of the lack of egg was caused by the dampness and clamminess of the henhouse. Hens neither can nor will lay in a house that is damp and depressing as a cellar.

Overcrowding is another reason why hens fail to lay. If there are not enough nesting boxes or if the floor space or the roosting places seem overcrowded there will be certain falling off in egg production that may be very serious. There is, of course, but one way to remedy this. There must be more room provided for the flock.

Vermil is another reason and a big one. Lousy hens will not lay. The vitality is being sucked out of them and the energy that ought to go into making a few hundred miles per hen. The irritation that hens suffer when carrying these mites and lice is bad enough to keep them from laying even if the parasites were not drawing out their vitality at the same time.

Securing a Prize Winner.

It should be remembered that every egg hatched from prize winners will not mature into a prize-winner. You may be surprised to learn that only about one out of every ten chicks hatched from the strongest blood lines in the world matures into a prize winner.

Many Eggs Infertile.

Do not expect too much from the breeder you buy eggs from; eggs may be fertile, but from some unknown cause they fail to hatch. Very often the cause is due to the low vitality of the hen—often the result of irregular temperature if artificially incubated.

Cleanliness is Important.

RUNAWAY JUNE

TWELFTH EPISODE.

The Spirit of the Marsh.

CHAPTER I.

A STEAM yawl, with black smoke pouring from her stovepipe, suddenly stopped its churning halfway across New York bay as the principal passenger, a long nosed woman with high arched brows, recognized through a wabbly jointed telescope the leaders in a procession of five speedy motorboats which swept rapidly toward her.

"Turn around quick!" the woman ordered as the first motorboat bore down, and she dashed a clinder from her heady eye. "Here comes the runaway bride!"

"I'm turning her now, ma'am," reported a short, thick individual whose round face was one consecutive smudge. "Don't you hear our engines stopping?"

"These she goes!" screeched Honoria Blye the long, narrow steel gray boat flashed past, bearing, besides its driver, a beautiful young girl in a yachting costume, protected as much as possible from the flying spray in the arm of a tall man with a soft felt hat and a loosely knotted cravat.

"Why, she isn't with my husband!" cried Honoria Blye.

"No'm," confessed Bill Wolf, putting a fresh smudge on his round face as the clinder laden smoke rolled down; "not now." His perplexity cleared. He spied the second boat. "There he comes!"

"Gilbert!" screamed the woman as the second boat shot by, driven by a heavy man with a round head and thick lidded eyes and carrying as its passenger a dark, handsome man with a black Van-dyke, whose whole attention was fixed on the beautiful girl in the forward boat. "Gilly!" The dark, handsome man paid no attention. "You viper!" she shrieked; then she whirled to Bill Wolf. "Why don't you turn this around and chase them?"

"We're turning, ma'am," reported Bill Wolf, looking anxiously at the engineer. "Don't you hear the engine reversing?"

The third boat shot past, driven by a white mustached man in evening clothes.

"That's the creature who corrupted my husband!" shrieked Honoria. "He was with Gilbert the night he took his trunk away! You beast!" she screamed, and then she caught sight of the occupants in the fourth boat, a little chauffeur with blazing eyes and the tiniest of mustaches and a stiff woman, who bent eagerly forward.

"The maid of the runaway bride!" explained the justly famous detective, Bill Wolf. "Do you notice that we're turning now, ma'am?"

"Ned Warner, the deserted groom!" announced Honoria Blye as the fifth boat darted past. Ned held binoculars to his eyes, and they were focused alternately on beautiful June Warner in the arm of the artist and upon the closely pursuing Gilbert Blye. With him were a plump and placid small man, who drove with unwelcome cruasies in his brow, and a generously plump young woman, who was half hysterical.

"We're turned, ma'am," said Bill Wolf, clutching Honoria Blye by the elbow. "Don't you see the Federal building?"

On the dock there stood a watchman who consisted of an overcoat and cap.

And silently, motionless hour by hour he looked out toward the bay. A swift motorboat, slender pointed, steel gray, dashed up, and from it the artist quickly lifted beautiful June Warner. The overcoat and cap moved not a muscle, but from far off Ned Warner, in the fifth boat of that strange regatta, through his powerful binoculars saw that landing, saw June cling to her newly found protector, saw, from the bend of his head, that the artist's eyes were filled with appreciation for the beauty of the fair little runaway bride. Straight up the dock they ran to the street and hailed a passing taxi and whirled away.

A keen little racer dashed up, spraying the water in a glittering translucent sheet as it curved into the slip. From it sprang the black Vanddyke Gilbert Blye in time to see the taxicab whirl away with beautiful June. Through his powerful binoculars Ned Warner saw Blye gesticulating with anger, saw the heavy, round headed Edwards climb clumsily upon the dock and stamp his foot.

A third boat, a trim, little white cutter, from it scrambled the little mustached Orin Cunningham. Through his powerful binoculars Ned Warner saw Cunningham, too, give way to a fit of fury, and Ned finally gritted his teeth and clinched his fists as he saw those scoundrelly pursuers of his lovely bride race up the dock. They hailed a passing taxi and whirled away up the street.

A fourth boat. A little French chauffeur with a tiny mustache and a stiff woman with high cheek bones, who bent and glanced painfully as she was pulled to the dock.

"Hey!" The overcoat and cap at last had moved, rapidly, violently. They pounced between Henri and Marie. "You're pinched!"

"Pinched, monsieur? Impossible!" protested Henri in astonishment. "For what is it that we are pinched? Behold the boat! We have returned it." Marie started to run away.

"Hooray!" On his side Henri jerked and, laughing gaily, sprang after Marie. Up on the street, in the shelter of a warehouse, stood a touring car. As he ran Henri reached in his pocket for a key. Behind them came pounding the overcoat and cap, blowing a shrill watchman's whistle through the slit in the collar. The fugitive from justice, easily outdistancing the heavy rubber boots, gained the car. With a bow which had in it all the grace and gallantry which could have been displayed had he used much more time Henri assisted Marie to her seat. He sprang in beside her. He inserted his key. He pressed the starting button. Silence! Bah! The motor was cold!

"You're under arrest!" And an iron-like middle finger thumped Henri on the shoulder. A policeman had arrived. "Arrest, M. Officer," cried Henri. "Impossible." And he made another effort to start his engine. "Look, the boat we have!"

"Do you know Officer Dowd?" asked Marie.

"Dowd?" repeated the solemn policeman, shaking his head.

"Do you know Officer Moran?" "Can't say as I know Moran."

"Do you know Officer O'Toole?" And she beamed high up into the solemn policeman's face.

"O'Toole? O'Toole? East side?" "Listen, M. Officer, eh?" broke in Henri.

Marie had furtively kicked him on the shins.

"We took the boat, yes, but you will comprehend, monsieur?"

"Get it? He says he took the boat?" This was from the cap and the overcoat.

"Take 'em along!" rumbled the cap and overcoat.

I guess I'll have to take you," the officer said with regretfully. "Will you walk or will you ride? It's only up a couple of blocks."

"Walk!" exclaimed Henri in astonishment. "Never!" He rushed to the front of his car and cranked it. Off they went to the police station.

CHAPTER II.

FURTIVE eyed butler with a young face on the withered and stooped body of an old man admitted the runaway bride and her escort into a magnificent studio hung with rare tapestries, embellished with exquisite paintings, fitted with quaint furniture and objects of art from all over the world.

And here June Warner was introduced by Artist Durban to his wife, a bright eyed woman of great charm. She received June with almost gushing cordiality.

"The Spirit of the Marshes," laughed

June as "the Spirit of the Marsh."

death. Before we could reach the hut there were shrieks upon shrieks as the young girl's voice, then shots, one after another. Wonderful!" He shook back his long hair and laughed, and his wife paled. June trembled and grew faint with the memory of it, and her eyes distended with a recurrence of her terror. "As we burst through the tall marsh rushes I saw on the island this beautiful creature held by a gigantic murderer. A woman with a beautiful silk shawl over her rough clothing was running toward the hut. Another murderous thief was lying on the ground. Down the channel from the open water there came two speed boats, one driven by a man with a mustache, in evening clothes and a silk hat, and the other, driven by a round headed man, carried a dark, handsome fellow with a black Vanddyke, who stood up shooting two revolvers. I fired in the air. The gigantic murderer dropped this beautiful creature, and she ran shrieking to my boat, in terror not only of the desperate bandit, but of the men in the boats. Jimmy threw on full speed, and away we darted; hotly pursued by an entire bay full of shouting, gesticulating people. It was marvelous! I have never enjoyed such a morning!"

"You poor dear!" The artist's face was instantly contrite. "You must be tired and cold and half famished and frightened to death. And you're all wet." She raised June by the hand.

"The Spirit of the Marsh," mused the artist, studying June critically.

Mrs. Durban's bright eyes sparkled back at him as she led June away to her own rooms, where she selected a negligee for her beautiful hair.

In a richly furnished office which contained no hint of business except for its telephone and the long rows of push buttons sat Gilbert Blye and Orin Cunningham and T. J. Edwards in earnest conference. Cunningham still in his evening clothes, Edwards still with his pajamas buttoned inside his coat and the carpet slippers on his feet. Button after button the black Vanddyke man pushed, and one after another silent, stealthily moving, non-communative men came in and with grave faces received their instructions and departed.

Henri and Marie stood in front of a mottled face desk sergeant with a sausage-like red mustache.

"Your names," he demanded.

"Volla!" agreeably returned Henri. "I am—ugh!" And he lifted his foot sharply. Marie had kicked him on the ## Ten Weeks in Bed—Eminent Physicians Failed—A Wonderful Recovery.

I wish to inform you of the great benefit I have derived from the use of Swamp-Root. I had been a sufferer for more than twenty years from kidney and liver trouble and was almost constantly treated by the most eminent physicians who could give me temporary relief. I had been in bed ten weeks when I began the use of Swamp-Root. Inside of twenty-four hours time I could see that I had been greatly benefited. I continued to use Swamp-Root until I had used several bottles when I really felt that my old trouble was completely cured and I am positive that any person suffering with kidney or liver trouble can be cured by the use of this preparation.

I am now in the best of health, better than I have been for ten years or more. I do not know how to express myself as strongly as I desire, in favor of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, as I am sure that it saved my life and that my good health is due entirely to this great remedy. I heartily recommend it to every sufferer and am confident they can be benefited as I have been. It is a pleasure for me, gentleman, to hand you this recommendation.

MRS. H. J. PRICE, 1406 Central St., Portsmouth, Ohio.

Personally appeared before me this 13th day of September, 1909, Mrs. H. J. Price, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

Durban, and it was with a professional eye that he this time surveyed the beautiful girl. "It was an utterly impossible adventure, my dear." He stood before an elaborately carved Florentine table, while the ladies sat in the inglenook, in the flare of the sunset fire. His eyes still glowed with the excitement of the morning, and he laughed. "First time I've had a chance to use the revolvers you make me carry when I go out for the marsh sunrise. I was busy sketching, trying to catch that wonderful scarlet of the sun and the mist—fast, my dear—when suddenly I heard a piercing scream. It could come but from one direction—the hut. Immense! A real adventure! I folded my easel, drew my revolvers and told Jimmy to push through the reeds for life or

How cheerful was the blazing fire as June reclined in the inglenook, a cup of hot coffee on her lap, and a comfortable drowsiness stealing over her! She did not know how pretty she was in the filmy negligee, but Bennett and Vivian Durban did as they sat at the little studio table, which the artist's favorite table, and turned pleading eyes upon their beautiful guest.

Their pleasure in June, however, was scarcely equal to the charming picture of domesticity which they afforded June. It was such pleasant companionship that she had expected to enjoy with Ned, just they two alone. But that tete-a-tete breakfast was yet to come. How long must it be to the end of that separation which had begun on their wedding day, begun in only a few fleeting hours after their marriage? The happiness had lasted only through the going away amid a shower of rice and through those first blissful moments alone in the Pullman drawing room, surrounded by their white ribboned luggage.

In the richly furnished office one after another of the silent, grave faced, stealthily moving men came in and gave their low voiced reports to the eager Cunningham, the confident Blye, the impatient Edwards. At last one of the men brought in a fellow who bore a young face on the hooped and withered figure of an old man. This fellow approached the table furtive eyed on Blye's invitation, and they all mumbled together for awhile in low voices. He put something in his pocket as he went out, and he left the three men laughing. They called him go. They had finished their office work.

A butler brought in the mail to the Durban as they finished their breakfast. Durban walked out toward the garden. He seemed anxious to conceal something. His wife followed. Durban opened a long envelope and with an expectant smile and took from it a folded document.

"My dear"—his voice vibrated with pleasure—"can't keep my secret. Tomorrow is the fourth anniversary of our wedding, and it is my gift to you in commemoration of that happy event."

Her eyes shining, the woman took the document and opened it.

"A deed to this house!" she cried. "And all that it contains," laughed her husband, "everything, including myself."

There was an exclamation of delight. The woman kissed him again and again and called him a dear boy and a good boy and the best husband in the world. June, who had awakened and followed them, drew back, so they would not know that she had heard, but she was glad for once to have been an unwitting eavesdropper, glad to have shared in this joyous moment.

CHAPTER III.

DOWN at the dock Ned Warner's detectives appeared, and Bouncer began to pick up the trail at the landing, ran excitedly up to the street at the point where June and Bennett Durban had taken the taxi. Bouncer began to go round and round in widening circles, whining, his nose close to the ground. The trail was lost, as they had known that trail would be, and from here the detectives scattered, seeking everywhere in their own methods for a clew to the whereabouts of the runaway bride. As they left the vicinity, they picked up the wayward taxi, dragging behind it a steam yawl with frosty mist on its stovepipe, and a very much begrimed lady with a long nose and high arched brows landed and went away without a word, pausing only to cast a look of withering scorn at the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf. That short, thick individual, with much puffing exertion, scrambled up and renewed the smudge on his face with a rotary motion of his sleeve and swore profusely; then he, too, stomped away.

Blye and Edwards and Cunningham in a luxurious limousine stopped at a house, where they were ushered into a

"He is Jules Lefon," snapped Marie. "Non! Non! Non!" indignantly objected Henri, and there ensued a vigorous argument.

"And am Rose Hesper," calmly finished Marie.

"What's the charge?" asked the desk sergeant.

"Swiping a boat." This hoarse information came from the overcoat and cap.

"I don't know about the Frenchman," whispered the phenomenally long policeman in the sergeant's red ear. "But the girl seems to be all right. She knows Officer Dowd on the east side and Moran and O'Toole and that bunch."

"Oh!" The information seemed to have some weight. The officer raised heavily from his wide chair and waddled through the door just back of him. He was gone, long, silent minutes, but when he came back his face was knotted into what seemed permanent corrugations. "So you're a friend of Dowd and Moran and O'Toole and that bunch?" he thundered at the luckless Marie. "Well, I telephoned 'em all, and not one of 'em knows any Rose Hesper! Lock 'em up!"

"But, monsieur, it is all a mistake!" cried the pseudo Jules Lefon. "Made-moiselle is no!"

Crack! That kick on the shin was distinctly audible throughout the little room, but it had its effect. Henri at last had the hint, and he shut his lips tightly together beneath his tiny mustache as he and Marie, to the intense gratification of the overcoat and cap, were led away and locked in their respective cells.

In the dainty rose and white drawing room which Ned and June Warner had fitted up to be their nest Ned sat in consultation with June's father and mother and Bobbie Blethering and June's bosom friend, Iris, and the three detectives. On the floor by Mrs. Moore's feet lay June's handsome colle, Bouncer, but at the first mention of his mistress' name he was up and barking loudly.

"Your wife's dog?" said the chief of Ned's detective force, and Ned nodded. "We'll take him."

Out in the bay a steam yawl, its stovepipe cold, was being towed majestically in by a rowboat, at the oars of which sat a thin whiskered fisherman and a boy with cracked knuckles and a short, thick nose. The fisherman was a continuous rotary smudge. This man was Bill Wolf, and through his smudge were already streaking rivulets of honest toil. On board the yawl and urging her crew with helpful voices and gestures was Honoria Blye, clad in her high arched brows, clinders in her darkened hair and clinders in her disposition.

How cheerful was the blazing fire as June reclined in the inglenook, a cup of hot coffee on her lap, and a comfortable drowsiness stealing over her! She did not know how pretty she was in the filmy negligee, but Bennett and Vivian Durban did as they sat at the little studio table, which the artist's favorite table, and turned pleading eyes upon their beautiful guest.

Their pleasure in June, however, was scarcely equal to the charming picture of domesticity which they afforded June. It was such pleasant companionship that she had expected to enjoy with Ned, just they two alone. But that tete-a-tete breakfast was yet to come. How long must it be to the end of that separation which had begun on their wedding day, begun in only a few fleeting hours after their marriage? The happiness had lasted only through the going away amid a shower of rice and through those first blissful moments alone in the Pullman drawing room, surrounded by their white ribboned luggage.

In the richly furnished office one after another of the silent, grave faced, stealthily moving men came in and gave their low voiced reports to the eager Cunningham, the confident Blye, the impatient Edwards. At last one of the men brought in a fellow who bore a young face on the hooped and withered figure of an old man. This fellow approached the table furtive eyed on Blye's invitation, and they all mumbled together for awhile in low voices. He put something in his pocket as he went out, and he left the three men laughing. They called him go. They had finished their office work.

A butler brought in the mail to the Durban as they finished their breakfast. Durban walked out toward the garden. He seemed anxious to conceal something. His wife followed. Durban opened a long envelope and with an expectant smile and took from it a folded document.

"My dear"—his voice vibrated with pleasure—"can't keep my secret. Tomorrow is the fourth anniversary of our wedding, and it is my gift to you in commemoration of that happy event."

Her eyes shining, the woman took the document and opened it.

"A deed to this house!" she cried. "And all that it contains," laughed her husband, "everything, including myself."

There was an exclamation of delight. The woman kissed him again and again and called him a dear boy and a good boy and the best husband in the world. June, who had awakened and followed them, drew back, so they would not know that she had heard, but she was glad for once to have been an unwitting eavesdropper, glad to have shared in this joyous moment.

DOWN at the dock Ned Warner's detectives appeared, and Bouncer began to pick up the trail at the landing, ran excitedly up to the street at the point where June and Bennett Durban had taken the taxi. Bouncer began to go round and round in widening circles, whining, his nose close to the ground. The trail was lost, as they had known that trail would be, and from here the detectives scattered, seeking everywhere in their own methods for a clew to the whereabouts of the runaway bride. As they left the vicinity, they picked up the wayward taxi, dragging behind it a steam yawl with frosty mist on its stovepipe, and a very much begrimed lady with a long nose and high arched brows landed and went away without a word, pausing only to cast a look of withering scorn at the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf. That short, thick individual, with much puffing exertion, scrambled up and renewed the smudge on his face with a rotary motion of his sleeve and swore profusely; then he, too, stomped away.

"What's the charge?" asked the desk sergeant.

"Swiping a boat." This hoarse information came from the overcoat and cap.

"I don't know about the Frenchman," whispered the phenomenally long policeman in the sergeant's red ear. "But the girl seems to be all right. She knows Officer Dowd on the east side and Moran and O'Toole and that bunch."

"Oh!" The information seemed to have some weight. The officer raised heavily from his wide chair and waddled through the door just back of him. He was gone, long, silent minutes, but when he came back his face was knotted into what seemed permanent corrugations. "So you're a friend of Dowd and Moran and O'Toole and that bunch?" he thundered at the luckless Marie. "Well, I telephoned 'em all, and not one of 'em knows any Rose Hesper! Lock 'em up!"

"But, monsieur, it is all a mistake!" cried the pseudo Jules Lefon. "Made-moiselle is no!"

Crack! That kick on the shin was distinctly audible throughout the little room, but it had its effect. Henri at last had the hint, and he shut his lips tightly together beneath his tiny mustache as he and Marie, to the intense gratification of the overcoat and cap, were led away and locked in their respective cells.

In the dainty rose and white drawing room which Ned and June Warner had fitted up to be their nest Ned sat in consultation with June's father and mother and Bobbie Blethering and June's bosom friend, Iris, and the three detectives. On the floor by Mrs. Moore's feet lay June's handsome colle, Bouncer, but at the first mention of his mistress' name he was up and barking loudly.

"Your wife's dog?" said the chief of Ned's detective force, and Ned nodded. "We'll take him."

Kentucky Made Vehicles for Kentucky People at Wholesale Factory Prices

Read What Customers Say

James E. Gray, Watford, Ky., says: "My buggy arrived in Watford safely and without being damaged in shipment. Now, I want to tell you I am well pleased with it. I am sure I could have purchased no such buggy of any other firm or factory for a price so reasonable. It is not only well made and stylish, but is a very comfortable one and there is no doubt in my mind but that it will prove to be what it is guaranteed to be. All of the neighbors and friends to whom I have shown the buggy agree with me that it is the greatest bargain, and I suspect it will only be a short time until you will have some orders from this part of the country. I am going to do my best to advertise your splendid buggy, for I feel that you have proven a friend to me by sending such a buggy, therefore I shall encourage and make as many sales as possible to show my appreciation."

T. C. Williams, McDonald, Tenn., writes: "I received my buggy all O. K. and find it is a dandy one and everyone who has looked at it has passed a compliment on it. It is a well-built vehicle and I am well pleased with it. I hope that I may be the cause of your selling more in this country."

Edward Thornton, Fox Chase, Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I find my buggy strong up to every feature you claim for it. It is very comfortable. I have ridden 25 miles at a time with no fatigue. I was somewhat pessimistic and inclined to take some of your strong assertions with precaution, not having purchased many goods from advertisements. From your manly, straight-from-the-shoulder correspondence, I was persuaded to send my order. I am fully convinced your method of doing business has been the secret of your success, and when next in the market for the carriage the order is sure to go to you."

A. F. Carpenter, Wolfstown, Va., writes: "I received my buggy the first of September. Since that time have given it a thorough road test and I find it exactly as you represented it to me. I am perfectly satisfied with it in every respect—in fact, I have seen none that equals it for a much higher price, and I feel I have value received for every cent of my investment."

Edgar M. Hunt, Sanders, Ky., says: "I like my buggy and harness fine. I like it better than any buggy I ever saw. Several people who have seen my buggy talk like they would order a buggy from you in the spring. You can use my name in advertising if you wish to do so. Please send Mr. B. K. Davis a catalog of your buggies, as he asked me to write you for one."

Emory M. McCord, Greenwood, S. C., writes: "We are more than pleased with the buggy you shipped us the first of June, and now it is December 6th, and every one who sees it wants to know where we got it. We have had a good many to ask how much we paid for it and they seem to be more than surprised at the price paid for such a pretty buggy. A friend bought a new buggy after we got ours and paid $115.00 for it without harness. When we get ready for another new buggy we will not think of buying from anyone but you. I am sending you names of friends. I do hope you will be able to sell each a new buggy."

Marcus A. Whisler, Jamestown, Ind., says: "Buggy and set of driving harness received the 17th. Am well satisfied with both and must say that the harness and buggy are certainly made with great care, both workmanship and selection of material. I would like for your painter to send me some brown paint, just a very small amount to apply to a few places. I notice have been marked by shipping. Any time I can be the cause of an order being sent you by my friends, I will consider I have helped both them and yourself."

Lawrence Melugin, R. F. D. No. 1, Reeds, Mo., writes: "I am mailing you a picture of myself, horse and buggy which I bought from you some time ago. It isn't a very good picture, but make it will give you an idea. You never mind what the pictures cost for I think you have done me enough favors and gave me such a good bargain on that rig that the pictures shall not cost you anything. I am not in the habit of bragging on anyone, but I will when it is worth while."

Our Large Factory With Annual Capacity of 20,000 Finished Vehicles.

Yes Sir: We save you all Agents', Dealers', Wholesalers' and Jobbers' profits and commissions—we don't have traveling salesmen to stop at expensive hotels, and travel around on high salaries. Our entire business is conducted by mail—we have eliminated every extra and unnecessary expense. We are giving the vehicle buyers of this county the greatest values ever known. We manufacture right here in our own large factory as high grade vehicles as it is possible to produce and sell them to you at the wholesale price and save you all the "rake-off" of the middlemen.

Here Is How Our Plan Hits the Middleman

We have sold hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of vehicles and harness direct from factory to consumer, and every sale has been a clean-cut straight-from-the-shoulder SMASH between the eyes of some "middleman." We are sorry for this—we regret that our pathway to success should be strewn with wrecked hopes and thwarted ambitions of those who have tried in vain to hold us back. Personally we have nothing against dealers, agents, jobbers, mail order catalog houses and other middlemen, who seek to gather two or three profits, where we are satisfied with one—we are really sorry for them, because they are doing business in the wrong way. A vehicle or set of harness is never worth more than the factory price, and because we save you all the expense and profits of the middlemen, they should not grow peevish and throw things at Bohon, for neither I nor my customers and friends are to blame—it is simply the law of supply and demand at work. Folks will buy where they can get the most for their money. That's the whole matter in a nutshell. Our plan hits the middleman, because the vehicle users of this country have made up their mind to do business on the straight line from factory to user, rather than on the zig-zag line from maker through traveling salesmen, jobbers, dealers, agents or catalog supply houses to user. Is there a reason?

You must either buy directly or indirectly—you must either pay three profits or one profit on your vehicles and harness. When a dealer buys a vehicle, he buys indirectly and absolutely must pay two or more profits before he takes the vehicle from the crate. Now, if you buy of a dealer, you must not only pay these two or three profits, but in addition, you must pay the dealer's profit and also his selling expense extra—four profits in all. When you buy of us, you buy directly—you pay one small profit. Our price to you is less than dealers can buy vehicles for spot cash in carload lots. Don't let the price-boosting middleman throw dust in your eyes—find out for yourself—get the facts, then decide. If you do this, you will surely buy of Bohon and save agents', dealers', jobbers' and salesmen's commission.

Thirty Days Free Road Trial

Life Long Guarantee Backed by Our $30,000 Bank Bond

Every Bohon vehicle is sold on a thirty days' free road trial. We want you to try it as your own—submit to any test and then decide whether you want to keep it. Compare it closely point for point with other vehicles in your neighborhood, either in use or offered for sale, and if you are not fully convinced that we have furnished you the best made, the handsomest finished, the easiest riding and the lightest running buggy you ever saw, and if you do not think that by dealing direct with our factory you have saved at least $25.00 to $40.00—if in fact, for any reason you are not perfectly satisfied, and if the vehicle is as represented and in strict accordance with our claims—we will take it back and stand all the loss. If after the trial you keep it—as we know you will—you are absolutely protected against any loss or trouble resulting from defective material or workmanship—for if ever at any time it matters not when, whether one, two, three, five or ten years—any piece or part proves imperfect, we will replace or repair it free of charge.

As an absolute protection to you, under this guarantee, we have deposited with the Mercer National Bank of this city, our legal binding bond for $30,000, and if we ever make a claim under the guarantee that we did not carry out, we can be made to forfeit this bond. Just stop and think what this means to buy a vehicle under a life-long, unlimited guarantee, backed by a bank bond. If we did not make as fine vehicles as it is possible to produce—how could we make such an offer?

OUR LARGE MODERN FACTORY

Our large, modern factory is just as up-to-date as any in the United States. We have every facility for manufacturing high-grade vehicles at the lowest cost of production. Please don't confuse our factory with some of the small repair shops here in Central Kentucky that possibly assemble one hundred vehicles in the course of a year, for we manufacture them by the thousands and sell them all over the United States, as well as in many foreign countries. We have every new labor-saving machine, every practical arrangement known. We have here as fine a collection of vehicle builders as was ever gotten together by any firm anywhere. They are men of experience and ability, clean, moral and conscientious—they are men who like their work. Visit our office and factory if you can, and see for yourself how Bohon vehicles are made. Our factory is of personal and vital interest to you and every other vehicle user who wants to know the facts about why and how Bohon makes the best style vehicles, maintains the very highest quality and undersells the world. If every vehicle user in Kentucky really knew the truth and facts about the wonderful values we give—in spite of our already tremendous business—we would have to increase our factory, at least ten to fifteen times in order to supply the demand.

Come to See Us--Visit Us at Our Factory

Some people are pretty hard to convince, especially when they don't want to be. Like the old backwoodsman on his first visit to the circus for instance. He walked cautiously around the giraffe, looked the tall fellow up one side and down the other for about five minutes; then shifted his quid from one side of his mouth to the other, took off his glasses, wiped them carefully, and turning to the attendant said:

"Huh! There Ain't No Such Animal!"

That old fellow reminds me of the people who say "Bohon has no factory; Bohon's vehicles lack quality; made to sell, not to wear, etc." The only difference is that the old backwoodsman was trying to deceive himself—he honestly thought his eyes were playing tricks—while the fellow who says, "Bohon does not make the highest grade vehicles in his own factory right here in Harrodsburg," is trying for a selfish purpose to deceive you. Don't let the dealer, agent or middleman throw dust in your eyes. Get the FACTS—know for yourself, for any agent or dealer that tells you that we do not manufacture our vehicles right here in our own factory—does so in order to sell you a vehicle and pocket a big profit. We have here a factory equal in equipment to any vehicle factory in the United States—BAR NONE.

A Nervous Wreck

Had No Desire To Live — Peruna Is A Tonic and Strength Builder So Says

Mrs. Frank Stroebe, R. F. D. 1, Appleton, Wis. Her letter reads: "I began using Peruna a few months ago when my health and strength were all gone, and I was nothing but a nervous wreck. Could not sleep, eat or rest properly, and felt no desire to live."

"Three bottles of Peruna made me look at life in a different light, as I began to regain my lost strength. While my recovery took nearly four months, at the end of that time I was better than I ever had been before. I had a splendid color and never weighed more in my life."

"I certainly think Peruna is without a rival as a tonic and strength builder, and it has my endorsement."

Mr. Charles Brown, R. R. 4, Box 79, Rogersville, Tenn., writes: "I have tried many different remedies, but have found that Peruna is the greatest tonic on earth, and a perfect system builder."

farmers throughout the county with indications of a large acreage being put in.

Many tobacco beds were burned and sown in Garrard county last month, and it is believed that the acreage will very nearly approach that of 1914.

The market for all kinds of feed is exceptionally high, and each year corn has been shipped into the county, and it is now selling at $4.50 to $5 per barrel.

The war has stopped the importation of breeding stock to this country, but America may be called upon to supply the horse and mule market of Europe later.

Nearly every sheep raiser in Clark county has had fine luck with his lambs, and if no unforeseen trouble ensues the crop will be a large one. A few bunches of sheep have been sold at $8 to $9 per head recently. Farmers are expecting a good price for their lambs this year.

W. H. Leach purchased from B. Anderson last week 102 ewes with 105 lambs at a price of $8.50 per head, including the lambs. A. T. Marshall shipped to Cincinnati, 30 head of cattle averaging in weight 850 pounds, for which he received from $5.65 to $7.10 per hundred pounds.—Georgetown Times.

Bonta Brothers have 104 head of 1,400-pound cattle on their Shawnee Spring farm. On Saturday Mr. George Kyle offered them 55 cents a pound for these cattle delivered in Germany, but the offer was declined. A gentleman from Chicago will be here to look at them next week.—Harrodsburg Herald.

On the Chicago market last week the best farm mares sold for $190 to $255; $185 was paid for 1,300 to 1,500 pound horses in the British inspection, while the French inspection was taking 1,200 to 1,400 pound horses of the same type at $175, about the same money as these horses were worth last year.

C. B. Shaffer, of Chicago, has purchased from Pony Reasley and brother the McGrathiana stock farm near Lexington. The place contains 814 acres and the price was $220 per acre. Reasley brothers are natives of Garrard county, having moved to Fayette county a few years ago.

Large sales of young, unbroken horses to the United States War Department reports, are adding to the activity of Kansas City stockmen, who are said to have supplied agents of belligerent countries since September 1st with 60,000 horses and mules, valued at $12,000,000, and endeavoring to supply the French government with an additional 26,000 head.
